

Press release

Breisach, 24.05.2007

Upgrading to 4 GBs!

From now on the takeMS DDR2-667 SO-DIMM memory module is available with a capacity of 2 GB.

takeMS International AG, Breisach, the leading manufacturer for memory products has added a DDR2-667 notebook memory module with a capacity of 2 GB to its product range.

Using the takeMS SO-DIMM DDR2-667 memory modules, it is now possible to equip notebooks with random access memories of up to 4 GB. This way, the user can perform several applications at the same time more rapidly in spite of the increasing memory requirement of operating systems, programs and games. The new 2 GB DDR2-667 module will be built up using 16 128Mx8 components. With the programmed timings of 5-5-5-15 at corresponding fallbacks of 667MHz, these modules are compatible with JEDEC as well as with Intel specifications.

“In spite of a slight tendency to a glut on the PC market, we more and more entering into the notebook market and hope to have multiple growths in this market in the coming years“, said Edmund Dägele. “Therefore, it is very important for takeMS to push the development of memory modules in this segment, so that we can offer available efficient random access memories to our partners“.

Since July 1st, 2006, the takeMS International AG is acting as an independent company on the world market. Up to now, more than 6 million takeMS memories had been sold in more than 45 countries. Therewith, takeMS is the leading manufacturer for memory products. Rapid, mobile, safe and available: memories need to work and to make you available your data always and anywhere. For this reason, takeMS has defined the demanding German quality guidelines as its standard. National and international awards of the takeMS products are certifying the young company in its high demand. Being convinced of our products, the takeMS therefore is granting a guarantee of 10 years on random access memories and a total of 5 years on the innovative flash and USB products.
