VoIP-phone in mouse's clothing

SPEED-LINK VoIP Mouse

Weertzen, 23 June 2008 – At first glance what you see is a mouse. Small, honey-coloured, fitted with a scroll wheel and three buttons. But two more buttons on the sides suggest there's more to this mouse than meets the eye: flip the VoIP Mouse open and you have in your hand a fully-fledged phone to make calls via the net.

When you flip the mouse open you automatically launch Skype™, the highly popular online communications software. The LCD in the mouse shows the contacts you've stored. You can select and call your contacts at the touch of a button – it's that easy.

The VoIP Mouse works fine pressed to your ear but its integrated hands free device also makes it a multitasking beast. While you're on a call you can snap it shut and use it as a mouse at the same time. The neatly arranged microphone and speaker allow you to issue commands with your mouse and continue with your phone call simultaneously. You can also accept a call at the touch of a button – without flipping the VoIP Mouse open again.

The SPEED-LINK VoIP Mouse is available now at a recommended retail price of €49.99.
