

High demand for accessory products from own manufacturing leads TAMPOPRINT® to enlarge its raw cliché production and pad printing factory.

With the development of the silicone pads by Wilfried Philipp - founder and CEO of TAMPOPRINT AG, a new era for pad printing started. The fact is: that almost 50 years later printing pads from TAMPOPRINT are still the leader in quality and variety.

In order to meet the sustainable growth in demand, the company has opted to invest in a new high-tech production centre.

In a production area doubled in size adapted to industrial production conditions, raw cliché and pad printing manufacturing were combined at one location. At the same time, investments were made in modern equipment. Logistics processes were further developed additionally with the online catalogue and shop. With the optimization of manufacturing processes for cliché materials and printing pads TAMPOPRINT has succeeded not only to increase production quality, but also to reduce the cycle times.

"With the strengthening of our accessories and consumables division we are responding to the constantly growing demand," says Uwe Henning, Commercial Director of TAMPOPRINT AG. "We have responded to current and future customers and market needs. Our customers know that their processes are safe with our products, work well and thus quickly pay for themselves. "

Employees in the high-tech manufacturing center, together with the experts in the colour lab are forming a new team of experts, which also stands ready to solve demanding customer orders. Oliver Nitschke, Chief Operating Officer of TAMPOPRINT, adds: "Through the modernization and change, we expect further acceleration of internal research projects and shorter innovation cycles."
