

A huge range for the small 310

Wunderlich equips the BMW G 310 R

The BMW with the smallest cylinder capacity has been on the German market for a good six months: the G 310 R. It makes a thoroughly respectable impression, close to the S 1000 R in style. Motorcycle accessory manufacturer Wunderlich shows just how the roadster can be perfected.

The team from Sinzig includes the qualities of the tourer in the 310 with windscreens in clear or smoke grey and ensures a pleasant reduction in turbulences. Wunderlich's 25 mm handlebar riser matches this perfectly, guaranteeing greater riding comfort and a better feel for the handling. You can thus relax and tour for longer, and of course anyone on the road for long distances needs space for their luggage. No problem thanks to Wunderlich. The tried-and-tested multifunctional Elephant tank bag range from the BMW specialists can now also be adapted to the 310 R, and you can transport an additional 20 litres of luggage in the seat and luggage rack bag with the same name.

The Sinzig team scores points for safety with a fitted engine crash bar and helpful crash pads which protect you from the worst if the unthinkable happens. Indicator crash bars and a mudguard extension provide additional safety, the side stand plate guarantees secure standing and widened mirrors ensure a better perspective. Wunderlich protects the brake line openly placed on the swing arm with a discreet protector made of aluminium.

Wunderlich's range for the G 310 R is currently being expanded almost daily and you can find all new releases right now at www.wunderlich.de
